

NEW-YORK DAILY TRIBUNE, TUESDAY, JULY 24, 1877.

LOCAL MISCELLANY.

HOT WORDS BEFORE THE SURROGATE.
THE QUARREL BETWEEN HENRY L. CLINTON AND JOHN MCKEON RENEWED.

In the Surrogate's Court, Henry L. Clinton, on behalf of the executors of Judge Michael Connolly, replied, yesterday, to John McKeon, who seeks to break Judge Connolly's will. He commented sarcastically on his opponent's tenderness for Judge Connolly's memory, which had led him to make the daughter the assassin of her father's good name, had prevented her from receiving a proper provision, and had left the executors to defend an attack on her purity.

John McKeon interrupted in some excitement and the Surrogate called both to order.

Mr. Clinton claimed that no substantial benefit from this contest could now arise to any one—Judge Connolly's daughter being dead—except to the counsel who opposed him in the way of fees.

The Surrogate sharply interposed, declaring that he would not have further personalities in the suit. He said that it felt redundant to exhibit counsel who had been personally assailed by reference to an outside matter, but he must now insist that the personal discussion be stopped.

Mr. Clinton said he would conform to the ruling of the Court, and would say elsewhere what he had intended to say now.

Mr. McKeon—"That is not what I want."

Mr. Clinton—"Have I a right to comment on what Mr. McKeon said in Court?"

The Surrogate—"You have the right to comment on what he had occasion to say on the motives of those connected with the proving of this will, but I don't wish to comment to defend the dignity of this Court. I will do that myself."

"I have a quarrel with Mr. McKeon. It must be settled in another form."

Mr. Clinton—"I have no quarrel with him, but having been approached by him, I am compelled to do so."

Mr. McKeon—"I am compelled to do so. I am compelled to do so. I am compelled to do so."
